

The College of Education, at DePaul University, invites applications for part-time faculty teaching opportunities within the College's four departments: Teacher Education, Educational Policy Studies and Research, Leadership, Language and Curriculum and Counseling and Special Education. Part-time teaching positions are available throughout the academic year and for some departments, during summer sessions.

The College of Education seeks applicants with expertise and experience in the following areas:

- Social and cultural foundations in education
- Human development
- International and comparative education
- Qualitative and quantitative research methods
- Counseling
- Special education
- Math, social studies (elementary and secondary), and science (elementary and secondary) methods
- Sports and fitness management
- Exercise science
- Reading instruction and assessment
- Bilingual Education
- ESL
- World Language Education
- Curriculum Studies
- Educational Leadership and Administration

Academic course schedules fluctuate from quarter to quarter and selected individuals will work with individual departments to determine a quarterly schedule. Courses are not guaranteed; however the College does its best to give ample notice about available courses and potential course cancellations.

Applicants must have a Master's degree in an education field or comparable area of study. Applicants for Teacher Education methods courses must have minimum of 5 years of experience at the level of licensure.

- Curriculum Vitae/Resume
- Cover letter that includes a two-page statement describing the applicant's teaching philosophy
- Letters of recommendation may be requested

Submit complete applications to COEadjuncthiring@depaul.edu. Incomplete applications will not be considered.
